Breathing new life into neglected sites

Within Audley's ever-increasing portfolio of luxury retirement villages, we have a wide range of building styles, designed to blend harmoniously with the surrounding architecture.

In some cases, buildings are entirely new. In others, there is a mixture of converted historical buildings, and newly constructed properties that are mindfully designed to complement the older properties they surround.

Many of Audley's properties have listed status and generally tend to be located within conservation areas.

For some developers this would be a problem, but Audley embraces the historical and environmental constraints with huge aplomb and creatively restores a host of exceptional properties to provide owners with a genuinely superior selection of penthouses, apartments and cottages.

By identifying glorious, historic and listed buildings in need of renovation, Audley begins to create something very special. Preserving a piece of heritage and breathing new life into a building has forever been a passion for Audley, along with the desire to restore properties, presenting them with a new sense of purpose within a community.

Building Your Property

Standards

Audley employs specialist architects, mechanical engineers, project managers, structural engineers and other specialists to ensure that each one of our developments is individually designed to meet your needs and to fit into its local surroundings. Each Audley village has a character of its own, yet they all have an exceptionally high standard of quality construction and finish in common, as well as beautifully designed grounds and landscaped gardens.

Every care is taken to build apartments and cottages to suit our customers' needs, from the design of the layout to the high specification of the kitchens and bathrooms. We want you to enjoy living within the development and for it to suit all your requirements.

We continually strive to improve your experience and we listen to what our owners tell us, which is why the design and the specification of our apartments and communal areas are constantly evolving.

Local impact

During construction we consider the wellbeing of all those that could be affected and try to minimise the impact of the construction process on our customers and the local community.

Our hoardings are clearly identified and are always properly maintained; our deliveries are made at reasonable hours and consider the local traffic, and we have a strong emphasis on Health & Safety.

During development we make every effort to use environmentally friendly materials and local sub-contractors. We also keep on-site waste to a minimum and segregate as much waste for recycling as is feasible.

Environmentally Sustainable Development

During the first concept design of an Audley village, the design team look for opportunities to incorporate sustainable, low energy and innovative design solutions in order to create communities which surpass carbon targets by a substantial margin.

Audley always proposes that combined heat and power units are used for the communal buildings and that ground source heat pumps are used in the accommodation blocks.

Together with levels of insulation that exceed building regulation requirements, we aim to exceed carbon emission targets by 46% in properties and 17% in the communal buildings. In order to achieve this, Audley is currently using a range of renewable and low carbon technologies across many of its villages.

These include:

Solar Photovoltaic (PV) technologies

Infrastructure for future electric car charging points

Renewable air source heat pumps

Ground source heat pumps

Water conservation

Combined heat and power

Low energy lighting

Embedded technologies

Solar Thermal technologies

Audley's policy on reduction of waste and pollution

Sustainable urban drainage strategy
